COUNCIL'S £52.2M EMERGENCY BILL

By Jim Brock

jim.brock@nlhnews.co.uk

HARINGEY Council has responded to figures claiming that it has spent almost £200million in emergency housing over the past four years.

The data, obtained by Freedom of Information requests, appeared to show that the council had racked up a bill of £197m finding accommodation for people classed as homeless in the borough.

But that has since been refuted by the local authority, with the actual figure just over £52m – the £200m was for the council's entire temporary accommodation spend, rather than just what it paid out on emergency accommodation.

The latter covers paying for hotels and bed and breakfast accommodation for people left in dire straits with nowhere to stay.

The revised figure brings Haringey in line with other London boroughs and its total spend of £52.226m across the four-year period is almost £7m less than neighbouring Enfield (£59m).

Westminster, in central London, tops the list with a total spend of £111m.

Haringey spent £20.311m in the year ending March 2010, with that figure falling by almost half to £10.504m over the following 12-month period.

In the year to March 2012 the emergency accommodation spend was marginally up at £10.878m and over the following 12 months it dropped slightly to £10.533m.

The release of the emergency accommodation figures comes weeks after the publication of a report by London Assembly member Tom Copley about the number of council homes sold under Margaret Thatcher's popular Right to Buy policy now being rented out by private landlords.

According to the figures in From Right to Buy to Buy to Let, 1,719 of the 4,469 properties sold in Haringey – or 38.46 per cent – are now owned and rented out by private landlords.

The Right to Buy scheme was introduced by the Conservative government 34 years ago, allowing council tenants to buy their rented properties at considerable discounts.

High point at Wood Green development

On the roof: Councillor Alan Strickland, Peter Martin of Sanctuary, and London's deputy mayor for housing Richard Blakeway at the topping-out ceremony

A TOPPING-OUT ceremony has taken place at a development in Wood Green after building work there reached its highest point.

Housing and care provider Sanctuary Group is behind the Artisan Court development in Lymington Avenue, which will see 66 flats and shops replacing the prefabricated homes and commercial buildings which once stood there.

On Thursday, building work on the £13.6million scheme, which is being partly funded by the Greater London Authority, reached its highest point – the roof of a four-bedroom flat overlooking Noel Park.

The flats will all be energy efficient, with seven of them designed for people in wheelchairs. Of the 66, there will be 21 for shared ownership, 12 for intermediate rent and 33 for affordable rent.

Among those attending the topping-out ceremony were London's deputy mayor for housing, land and property Richard Blakeway and Haringey Council's cabinet member for regeneration and housing Alan Strickland.

Canver denies perverting course of justice

THE trial is taking place of a leading Haringey councillor accused of perverting the course of justice.

Nilgun Canver is appearing at Wood Green Crown Court accused of lying to the police after her son crashed a car he was driving without insurance on January 24 last year.

The incident happened soon after midnight in Seven Sisters Road, Tottenham, close to the junction with Elizabeth Road.

Ms Canver's son, Burak, 22, has already been convicted of taking the family's BMW car without consent, failing to stop after an accident and driving without insurance.

The court has heard that the St Ann's ward councillor claimed she was the one behind the wheel and that she offered compensation to 24-year-old Stavros Oikonomou, the pedestrian hit by the out-of-control car, rather than getting the authorities involved.

Ms Canver, 56, who lives in Harringay, denies the charge and the case continues.

Three charged over 'yid' football chants

THREE men have been charged in connection with using the word "yid" at two Tottenham Hotspur home matches last year.

Police last week charged Gary Whybrow, 31, of west London and Sam Parsons, 24, of Amersham, in Buckinghamshire, with using the term at Spurs' 2-1 Europa League win over FC Sheriff on November 7.

Peter Ditchman, of Bishop's Stortford, in Hertfordshire, was charged with using the same word at the 3-0 Premier League defeat by Spurs' London rivals West Ham United on October 6.

The trio have been bailed to appear at Hendon Magistrates' Court next Tuesday, where they will answer charges of using threatening, abusive or insulting words.

Ditchman has also been charged with possessing cocaine.

There has been much controversy about the use of the word "yid", which is Yiddish for "Jew", at Tottenham matches.

Spurs fans claim they chant the term as a defence mechanism against the fact that the once inoffensive word has been hijacked and used as an insult against Jewish people.

Refurbished post office will be open for longer

A POST office branch will close for a week while refurbishment work takes place.

Hornsey post office, in High Street, Hornsey, will shut at 5.30pm on Thursday, February 20, with the new-look branch opening at 1pm on Friday, February 28.

During that time, anyone needing a post office can use branches in Turnpike Lane, Harringay, and Topsfield Parade, Wood Green.

The revamped branch will open from 9am to 5.30pm on Monday to Saturday, with customers being able to buy car tax there.

High-tech monitors to check on pollution levels across borough

GREEN campaigners are cautiously welcoming the introduction of air quality monitors in the borough – but warn that the problem will escalate further without firm action.

Enfield Council last week announced plans to roll out 100 technologically advanced monitors in hot spots across the borough.

With one of London's most polluted roads, the North Circular, snaking a path through the south of the borough, thousands of cars pass through Enfield every day pumping out tonnes of toxic exhaust fumes.

The council believes that putting state-of-the-art sensors in a range of locations will allow it to keep a lid on pollution. But Green Party activist Douglas Coker warned that might not be sufficient.

Speaking to the Advertiser after the scheme was announced, Mr Coker admitted: "It does seem like a very interesting idea" – before adding: "It is all very well to build up this data, but realistically what can they do about the M25, the A10 or the North Circular?"

"There are a lot of sets of lights along the North Circular and we know that when cars are stationary with their engines on they pump out pollution. We would look closely at making sure there is less stop and start of traffic everywhere."

Chris Bond, cabinet member for environment, said: "By placing so many of these high-tech sensors at various key points around Enfield it will give us an even more detailed picture of what parts of the borough may have more of an issue with pollution than others, and what pollutants are where."

"That means we can take steps to clean up our air and protect residents from potential harm."

Lunch date for young politicians

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

Youthful insight: Members of the Enfield Youth Parliament, including chairman Kwame Owusu, foreground, met officers from Enfield Council and leading councillors, including Andrew Stafford, cabinet member for finance and resources, also front, last week

UNEMPLOYMENT was high on the agenda as members of Enfield Youth Parliament met leading councillors for the first time since being elected.

At an informal lunch hosted by deputy council leader Achilleas Georgiou at the Civic Centre, in Silver Street, Enfield, last week, the group of secondary school pupils met Andrew Stafford, cabinet member for finance and resources, Ayfer Orhan, cabinet member for children and young people, and Del Goddard, cabinet member for business and regeneration, as well as senior council officers.

It was the first time the aspiring politicians had met councillors since 16 members of the youth parliament were elected from 27 candidates standing in four constituencies – Chase, Edmonton, Enfield Lock and Southgate – in October.

Mr Georgiou opened the proceedings, organised as part of the council's consultation on next year's budget, by saying: "Youth unemployment is a big issue. We are trying to employ more and more people from Enfield and we try to encourage contractors to open up apprenticeships for our young people."

The youth parliament's chairman, 16-year-old Kwame Owusu, a pupil at St Ignatius College, in Turkey Street, Enfield, added: "One of the problems is that a lot of schools don't provide any work experience opportunities before going to university. And then you leave university without any proof that you have the skills for a particular job."

"Another problem is that a lot of young people feel unsafe on the streets and feel that the police don't really protect them. I would like to represent young people on those issues."

The youthful politicians will meet six times a year. They were elected for a two-year term and will regularly attend meetings of the council's children and young people's scrutiny panel as well as the children's trust board.

They will also be asked to present to a full council meeting.

'Horrificed' couple 'watched man attempt to lure cows'

Picnickers stunned to see naked person in field surrounded by livestock

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A WITNESS has described his feelings of "sickness" on seeing a naked man trying to engage in a sexual act with a herd of cows and a flock of sheep.

Paul Lovell, 61, of Magpie Close, Enfield, is standing trial at Wood Green Crown Court accused of outraging public decency by trying to engage in a sexual act with animals on September 4 last year.

Giving evidence for the prosecution yesterday, tree surgeon Lawrence Stephen told the court how he and his girlfriend had settled down for a picnic under an oak tree in a field close to Archers Wood, off Whitewebbs Lane.

Mr Stephen told the court that he and his girlfriend were shocked when they saw a naked man entering the field.

He said: "I could see a man who at first I thought was the farmer around the cows and sheep in the field. But when I looked closer it turned out to be a naked guy standing by the cows."

Mr Stephen went on to describe how he watched as the naked man, who he estimated to be between 60 and 80 years of age, "sort of tried to thrust his waist towards the cows, using his hands to guide the cows' mouths towards his crotch."

He added: "He wasn't successful with whatever he was trying to do with the cows - so he resorted to the sheep," which Mr Stephen explained were at the other end of the field.

"When he started walking towards the sheep he did exactly the same thing, just trying to lure the heads of the sheep towards his genital area."

Mr Stephen told the court that watching the scene made him feel "sick".

At that point Mr Stephen said he called the police, who told him they were on their way.

As he and his girlfriend waited for them to arrive, they watched as the man laid down in the field, and attempted to put his shorts back on.

Mr Stephen told the court: "The sheep he was trying to get started walking back towards him - he started taking his shorts back off again and when the sheep started walking away he put them back on again."

However, defence counsel Clare Dowse put it to Mr Stephen that in fact he might not have been in the field he identified on the map, and that he may well have been in a much larger field where he could not possibly have seen that the man was naked.

She asked him if it was possible that the man he saw lying down had stood up in order to shoo animals away from him, but Mr Stephen replied that he had not seen the man do that.

Ms Dowse added: "This man was not attempting to encourage animals to do any such thing (a sex act) to him."

Mr Lovell denies committing an act of outraging public decency

The trial continues and is expected to conclude today.

Fraudsters pose as couriers and police to steal bank cards

POLICE are warning vulnerable and elderly people in the borough to be on the alert for fraudsters posing as couriers.

Enfield Criminal Investigation Department is warning of crooks posing as police officers who phone vulnerable residents.

They convince their victims that they have caught a thief who has been using a copy of their bank card.

The con artist then says that in order to prosecute the thief, the police need the actual bank card as well as their pin number.

As the victims often are not able to physically get to a police station, the fraudster offers to arrange to have it picked up by courier.

As soon as the card is collected, the victim's bank accounts are cleared out.

To reassure the victim that everything is above board, the fraudsters insist that as soon as the courier comes to collect the card they should immediately hang up and cancel their card with their bank.

However, the criminal does not hang up - so the victim is in fact talking to the con artist, not the bank.

Police are working with minicab firms to identify any suspicious behaviour by fares.

The suspects have posed as police officers, bank employees and shop staff.

Detective Constable Emily Bugg, of Enfield CID, said: "There have been five incidents of this type reported to police in Enfield since January 16.

"If you are related to, or care for someone who may be vulnerable to this crime, please make sure that they are aware of these fraudsters and if they are in any doubt that a caller is genuine, please tell them to hang up and call police on 101 or contact their safer neighbourhoods team, making sure they use another line or check for a dial tone before ringing."

Police add that you should never give your pin number or bank card to anyone - dial 999 if a crime is taking place.

'I do - but who are you?' Immigration officials halt suspected sham wedding

A SUSPECTED sham marriage was busted by immigration officials after a tip-off that all was not as it seemed at a register office wedding.

Acting on information that the relationship between a 44-year-old Nigerian man and a 39-year-old woman from the Czech Republic might not be genuine, Home Office immigration enforcement officers descended on Enfield's register office in Gentleman's Row last week.

Officers arrested the Nigerian groom who they discovered was in the county illegally having overstayed his visa.

They also found he was carrying £500 in cash - which they believed was his fee for the bride.

The man was held in custody and now faces being kicked out of the country.

His would-be-bride was questioned by officers and later released.

David Seymour-Smith, head of the North London Home Office Immigration Enforcement team, said: "This is an example of the successful work we are doing to combat sham weddings and civil partnerships in north London.

"We work closely with registrars across the capital to prevent people from abusing the marriage system in a bid to get round our immigration laws.

"Where we receive information that a wedding may be suspicious we will investigate and, if necessary, intervene and arrest those involved.

"I would urge anyone thinking of entering a sham marriage to think again as there is every chance that you will be detained and removed from the country."

'Wedding' venue: Enfield Register Office

Andrew Stafford, cabinet member for finance and property at Enfield Council, said: "Enfield Council works hard to prevent all crime and I'm delighted we've been able to team up with the Home Office to prevent this particular scam.

"It is unfair on Enfield residents and taxpayers across the United Kingdom for people to enter the country illegally and take state handouts and benefits that could and should go to more deserving families."

Inquiries launched into two-year-old boy's death

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

TWO inquiries are under way into the death of a two-year-old boy who was mistakenly taken to Chase Farm Hospital by his mother because she thought emergency services were available there.

Separate investigations have begun to establish "the sequence of events that led to the boy being taken to Chase Farm" and other circumstances surrounding the tragic death of Muhammad Hashir Naveed, Liz Wise, chief officer of the Enfield Clinical Commissioning Group, told a meeting of Enfield Council's health and well-being scrutiny panel last Tuesday.

The toddler was taken to the hospital, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, at around 3am on Wednesday January 15. His mother did not realise that the hospital's A&E unit had closed last month.

The boy was then taken by ambulance to North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton, where despite medical efforts he was pronounced dead at 4am.

A serious incident inquiry has been started by the Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust and is expected to last eight weeks.

The Enfield Safeguarding Children Board's child death overview panel, which reviews the deaths of infants and children in the borough, is expected to produce a report, also within the next eight weeks.

Ms Wise told councillors: "We must be careful not to take a knee-jerk approach. We don't quite know what happened to this child and it is important that we come to understand the sequence of events that led to the boy being taken to Chase Farm. We are working closely with the hospitals to understand the circumstances under which the family went to Chase Farm and what services they were seeking to access."

Investigations under way: Liz Wise, the Enfield CCG's chief officer, and Alev Cazimoglu, chairwoman of Enfield Council's health and well-being scrutiny panel

Alev Cazimoglu, the panel's chairwoman, said: "Members of the public are upset and angry but we have to wait and see what will emerge from the inquiries, which we expect to be thorough and truthful. More needs to be done in terms of communicating what services can be accessed when and where, and the message from the CCG needs to be clear."

Chase Farm's new urgent care centre is open seven days a week, between 9am and 9pm.

Patients can gain access to a GP at the Barnetdoc-provided out-of-hours service at Chase Farm and are advised to call 111 first.

In an emergency, they should call 999.

Emergency services are available at North Mid and Barnet Hospital, in Wellhouse Lane.

MP calls for talks with Cameron

NICK de Bois has asked the Prime Minister to meet him to discuss "lessons that could be learnt" from the death of the two-year-old boy mistakenly taken to Chase Farm Hospital's closed A&E department.

Speaking at last week's Prime Minister's Questions in the House of Commons, Enfield North MP Mr de Bois referred to the death of Muhammad Hashir Naveed, who had been rushed to the hospital, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, by his mother in the middle of the night.

The toddler suffered a cardiac arrest and was taken by ambulance to North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton. He was pronounced dead at 4am.

Mr de Bois said: "Does the Prime Minister agree with me that the effects of reconfiguration, often put through despite local opposition, including from myself, mean we are asking people to decide where to go for help at moments of great personal stress?"

He asked David Cameron to meet him after publication of the hospital trust's inquiry into how the tragedy happened and to discuss "how we must do more to explain the choices" to make sure everyone knows where they can get emergency care.

The Prime Minister pledged that he "absolutely" would and added: "Anyone who has taken a desperately ill child to hospital in the middle of the night, when their child is at risk, knows what an incredibly desperate time it can be."

Mr Cameron added that he would be asking Health Secretary Jeremy Hunt to discuss the findings of the investigation with him.

Surge in 999 calls for an ambulance

By Koos Couvé

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

ENFIELD has witnessed the highest increase in ambulance call-outs to potentially life-threatening incidents in London over the past eight months, new figures show.

During a presentation at Enfield Council's health and well-being scrutiny panel last Tuesday, Paul Gates, deputy director of operations at the London Ambulance Service NHS Trust, revealed that the number of category A incidents in the borough went up from 11,590 between April and December 2012 to 13,489 over the same period last year – a 16.4 per cent rise.

The borough topped the London list in terms of growth in demand, followed by Bromley, which experienced a 13.8 increase, and the City of London, which reported a 13.2 increase. On average, London witnessed a 6.5 per cent rise in demand.

Most 999 calls in Enfield are made along the A10 corridor in the east of the borough, in Edmonton, Ponders End, Enfield Highway and Freezywater. Enfield Town is also an area of high demand.

The figures have raised concerns about the level of ambulance cover in the borough, particularly now the accident and emergency unit at Chase Farm Hospital, in The Ridgeway, Enfield, has been shut.

Ambulances take the nearest call wherever they are, meaning crews can start their shift in one part of the city and finish in another. Retired paramedic John Jewson said: "Around 4,000 people are moving into the borough every year. I don't think we have the cover to deal with that."

"And because we have not got the alternatives

Busy: Rising demand for an ambulance in Enfield was the highest in London in place for the closure of Chase Farm A&E, people will call an ambulance because they know they will get treatment quicker.

"The other concern is that ambulances don't stay in the same area. So not having an A&E in the north of Enfield is a problem because ambulances will not necessarily return there."

Asked whether the borough would get extra ambulance cover to meet increased demand, Mr Gates said he could not provide councillors with a clear answer.

"We are not actually sure why the number of incidents has increased but this is a piece of research we are currently going through and it will map the ambulances we need," he said.

An LAS spokeswoman said in December that the trust had put in place an additional fast response car in Edmonton to cover the borough.

Use planning powers to stop the spread of bookies', urges MP

By Koos Couvée

koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

ENFIELD Southgate MP David Burrowes has called on councillors to use planning powers to limit the number of betting shops in the latest political row over gambling in the borough.

Earlier this month in parliament, Mr Burrowes asked the minister for local government Nick Boles if Enfield Council had used Article 4 powers of the Town and Country Planning Act to limit the number of betting outlets.

Responding that this was not the case, Mr Boles said such powers had been used elsewhere.

Under current legislation, betting shops are grouped alongside banks, estate agents and other financial services and can be opened in buildings previously used as a pub or a cafe without planning permission.

But if the council applies for a direction under Article 4, bookmakers have to submit an application to open a new betting shop.

Mr Burrowes has also warned about the growth of fixed-odds betting terminals, which allow customers to place bets on roulette games and simulated horse racing. The number of machines is limited to four per shop.

It is feared that bookmakers are getting round the law by opening more branches, often in deprived areas.

The MP said: "Half of the revenue from bookmakers now comes from these machines, and it increases proliferation of betting shops and creates more problem gamblers."

"We can all play our part and while a government review is ongoing, the council must also play its part and use the powers it has available to it – as Barking and Dagenham Council has done."

But Chris Bond, Enfield's cabinet member for environment, said: "Using Article 4 is extremely cumbersome as we have to pass a motion at full council and apply to government. We would only use it for big projects."

Springing up: The borough has 140 betting shops, including these from three of the major chains – Coral, in Baker Street, Enfield; Paddy Power, in Bramley Parade, Oakwood; and William Hill, in Chase Side, Enfield

"We wrote to the minister two years ago urging him for a change in the law. That is what should happen and it would be very simple to achieve it by putting betting shops in their own planning class."

Asked whether the government, which has resisted planning reform on betting shops, was delaying taking action by insisting on a review, Mr Burrowes said: "It will not be as long as there are people like me putting pressure on the government that they will look into this seriously and deal with it."

Enfield has around 140 betting shops – with a staggering 26 in the Edmonton Green ward alone.

Mum still in dark 18 months after daughter's death

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A MOTHER has spoken of her frustration and sadness at delays that have stalled a thorough and satisfactory investigation of her daughter's death in July 2012.

Hannah Defoe, of Bush Hill Road, Winchmore Hill, was just 20 when she died while on holiday on the Caribbean island of St Lucia with her aunt and cousin.

The performing arts student, whose motto in life was, "Why walk when you can dance?", was electrocuted after diving into a swimming pool in the luxury resort of Juliette's Lodge Hotel, in Vieux Fort – a southern port town on the island.

However, despite the family's tireless attempts to get to the truth behind why their daughter died, delays and setbacks in getting information from the St Lucian authorities have meant that almost two years on from Hannah's death, there has still been no complete inquest in either England or St Lucia.

The latest painful twist for the family came just before Christmas when they were given 24 hours' notice that an inquest had been scheduled in the Caribbean island.

Their barrister sent a furious message to the Foreign Office, which, in turn, liaised with the St Lucian authorities and was able to get the inquest postponed until earlier this month.

At short notice the family made the eight-hour flight to the paradise island – but were met with yet another adjournment as it was only realised at the last minute that a jury was needed for the inquest.

This is the fourth adjournment of an official inquiry into how and why Hannah died in such horrific circumstances.

Speaking to the Advertiser about the family's ongoing battle to bring someone to account for the circumstances leading to their daughter's death, Hope Defoe, Hannah's mother, said: "What hurts most of all is Hannah loved life.

"She died not doing a bungee jump or taking a risk. She was taking a swim on holiday and it beggars belief that to this day we don't know why she died."

The next inquest date has been set for March 5 at North London Coroner's Court, in Wood Street, High Barnet.

But at this stage the family's lawyer is unsure if the St Lucian authorities will have provided the necessary information for the inquest to properly examine what happened.

"Two years later no one can say, 'Mrs Defoe, it was the lighting, it was a one-off, it cannot happen again and this is what we are doing to the person who did this'," added the grieving mother.

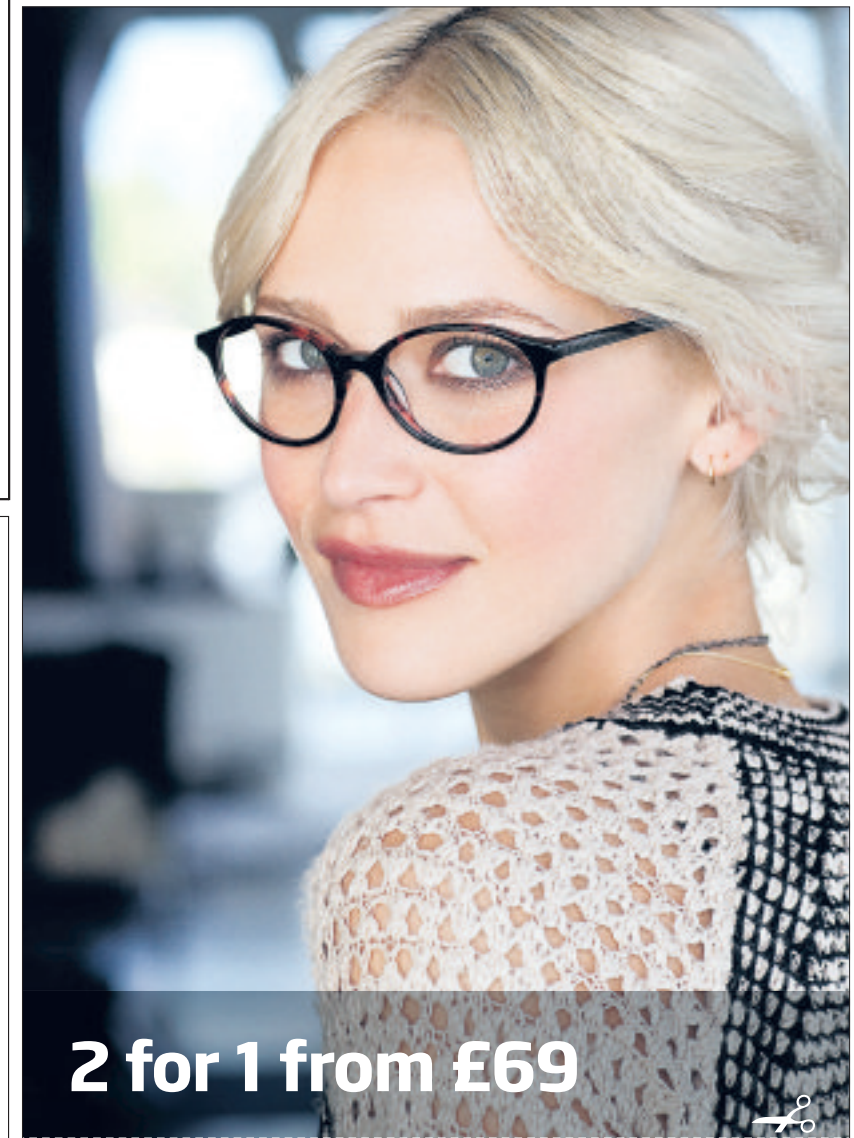

Although both Mrs Defoe and her husband have gone back to work, she admitted: "There's nothing now normal about our lives."

Unexplained death: Hannah Defoe died on holiday in St Lucia

Life president – Enfield Over-50s Forum

THE fight for the future of Chase Farm Hospital is not over. Discussions going on behind closed doors on the proposed acquisition of the Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust by the Royal Free Hospital are either a threat – or a great new beginning.

The Royal Free has finalised its business case for a takeover. Enfield residents have neither seen nor been consulted on the Royal Free plans, so what happened to former health minister Andrew Lansley's promise that there would be "no decisions about us without us"?

We know that Chase Farm has reported an expected deficit of £16.9million for this financial year – £500,000 worse than it expected on November 8.

It recently reported for the coming year: "A budget will be brought to the board for approval in March 2014 and currently the projected deficit was £32.5million."

Obviously, the Royal Free takeover case includes proposals not just to wipe out those projected losses, but to make the acquisition "wash its face" – City jargon for showing a profit.

Will that be by cutting staff and services, or will there be a big injection of new money?

We have a right to know.

The Royal Free plan has to be signed off by the three clinical commissioning groups covering Enfield, Barnet and Haringey.

Under the new hotchpotch NHS, it will then go to one quango called the Trust Development Authority and then to another quango called Monitor for final evaluation.

It's time the NHS came clean and told the people its long-term plans for Chase Farm Hospital.

Don't play with lives – reinstate hospital A&E

RE: "Boy dies after he is taken to closed A&E" (Advertiser, January 22).

The downgrade of Chase Farm is awful – they say the transition has been successfully done, but that is rubbish.

Everything has moved to Barnet, but they never answer the phone – the other day I tried to ring for an hour.

The loss of this boy's life is disgusting. The accident and emergency department should be reinstated at Chase Farm and make it a fully functioning hospital instead of playing with people's lives.

So, I urge the government, please, please bring back the A&E unit at Chase Farm.

Dinesh Hingoo
Fouracres, Enfield

□ I DON'T know why they say the law is an ass, but clearly the voice of at least 76,248 people, with cross-party politicians, has no influence on it when the law refuses to a request for a judicial review [about Chase Farm Hospital's downgrade], which is clearly needed.

Take for instance, the decisions by the Barnet and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust and the GP clinical commissioning groups from Enfield, Barnet and Haringey.

Professor George Alberti stated that primary care centre services in the communities would have to be up and running before any transfer of services away from Chase Farm, to prevent North Middlesex and Barnet hospitals being swamped.

Downgraded: Chase Farm Hospital

But they are not up and running in Enfield and it may be 2016 before they even get their full complement of GPs, as stated at the Enfield health scrutiny meeting.

Waiting in the wings to pounce is the Royal Free Hospital Trust, which is planning to take over the Barnet, and Chase Farm Hospitals NHS Trust, with their blessing. Once this happens, will land at Chase Farm be sold off?

Enfield Council must be commended for its efforts, where both a Conservative and then a Labour administration acted on behalf of residents to try and save services at Chase Farm.

Council must do more for partially-sighted people

ENFIELD'S Labour council has one of the worst records in London when it comes to supporting people with a visual impairment, according to a report by the Royal National Institute for Blind People.

This is a very poor performance compared to Conservative-controlled neighbours, Barnet, which is one of the best boroughs in London for carrying out local needs assessments effectively.

Following an examination of joint strategic needs assessment, the local needs of blind and partially-sighted people, and those at risk of developing sight loss, are not being prioritised by Enfield Council. There is little or no information regarding sight loss or sensory impairment in this borough – and in the 21st century, that's not good enough.

Pained by bad scooter drivers

JUST before Christmas a mobility scooter ran into me while I was waiting at the pharmacy counter in Boots, the chemist's.

Unfortunately, I am on steroids and when this scooter ran into my ankle, it immediately started to bleed.

I have been seeing the nurse at the doctor's surgery ever since. Hopefully, it is on the mend.

The reason I am writing is to comment on the very bad driving of a few mobility scooter drivers – mainly speeding in the precinct and on the pavements.

This gentleman actually told me that his brakes were not working. In a store!

Hopefully, he did not have a further accident on his way home.

Galling to see him standing

IT was with absolute revulsion that I read that Chris Joannides intends to stand for re-election at the forthcoming local elections (Advertiser, January 8).

The fact this man still aspires to any sort of a future in politics is beyond me.

He will not face legal action but is still facing an investigation by Enfield Council for his behaviour.

Mr Joannides is not fit to represent a nest of snakes – let alone the people of Enfield.

All three men are now due to appear at Blackfriars Crown Court next Wednesday, February 5.

Drug gang jailed over £20million heroin haul

By Koos Couvée
koos.couvee@nlhnews.co.uk

A MAN from Edmonton who was in a criminal gang involved in dealing in huge amounts of heroin has been jailed.
Marin Veres, 24, of Findon Road, was handed a 13-year prison sentence at Wood Green Crown Court last Thursday for his part in the supply of £20million worth of the drug.

Veres had been convicted of one count of conspiracy to supply the class A drug on December 19.
He was sentenced alongside Murat Yilmazer, 32, from Tottenham, who was also jailed for 13 years after being convicted of the same offence.
Murat Gungor, 36, from Chingford, was sentenced to 15 years for two counts of conspiracy to supply heroin and 33-year-old Bledar Haxhijaj, from Newcastle, was convicted of one count of the same offence and jailed for 14 years.

The four men were part of what police described as “a highly organised network” which included an additional 20 men and two women who were arrested between March and November last year during an operation by the Metropolitan Police’s Central Task Force.
In May, officers stopped a vehicle being driven by Veres in Enfield. It was found to contain 47 kilograms of heroin.
Earlier on the same day, officers had arrested Gungor and Yilmazer after stopping the two men in a car in Birmingham.
Their arrests led police to Haxhijaj, who was later spotted removing packages from a Jeep at a golf club in Derbyshire.

The vehicle was searched and 11 kilograms of heroin were recovered.
As part of the operation, police seized 100 kilograms of heroin with a street value of more than £20million, as well as £1.1m in cash.
Detective Inspector Chris Heerey, who led the investigation, said: “Those who choose to deal in illegal drugs will feel the full force of the Met.
“This was a lengthy and complex investigation which has stopped huge quantities of potentially lethal drugs from making it onto the streets.
“Our message is clear: if you deal in drugs, we will find you, we will arrest you and you will be put in front of the courts to face the consequences.”

Suitcases of drugs and money: 100 kilograms of heroin with a street value of £20million and £1.1m in cash were seized during an operation by the Metropolitan Police’s Central Task Force

Memorial day play recalls Holocaust

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

Remembering the Holocaust: Susan Stein plays the title role in Etti

SCHOOLCHILDREN heard the tale of a young Dutch Jewish student's journey from occupied Amsterdam to Auschwitz as part of the Holocaust Memorial Day events this week.

The theme of this year's day of remembrance was journeys – and Enfield Council hosted two performances of Etti, a play based on the diaries and letters of Esther Hillesum, who lived in Amsterdam when it was occupied by the Nazis.

The play tells of her difficulties living under the Nazi regime and her experience after being interned in the Westerbork transit camp before being taken to Auschwitz concentration camp.

She died in November 1943, aged 29.

On Monday, 120 students from secondary schools across the borough attended a performance at the Dugdale Centre, in London Road, Enfield Town.

A second performance was staged in the evening for dignitaries and the proceedings included speeches by councillors and rabbis.

Film-maker: Kevin Healey at the premiere of his new work

By Ruth McKee
ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

AN autism rights activist, who was once left housebound after receiving a torrent of abuse from online bullies, has premiered his campaign film in the borough.

The 15-minute documentary, simply entitled Anti Bullying Campaign, was screened at Enfield Cineworld, in Southbury Road, Enfield. on Monday night after campaigner and National Autistic Society ambassador Kevin Healey lobbied cinema chains to help him spread the word about the dangers of online bullying.

The documentary features interviews with high-profile victims of cyber bullying such as former X Factor finalist Chris Maloney and includes psychologist Dr Pam Spurr discussing what needs to be done to tackle the vitriolic speech that can spread like wildfire on anonymous platforms such as Twitter.

Kevin was spurred into making the film after his outspoken stance on autism issues on the microblogging site attracted a torrent of abuse, including vivid death threats from users hiding behind anonymous screen profiles.

One cyber bully even managed to get hold of his personal email address and sent a detailed threat to kill him directly to his inbox.

As Kevin explained: "People on the autistic spectrum have problems with social interaction and they take things very literally."

After receiving the threat, Kevin said that he was too frightened to leave his home for three months.

The 39-year-old wants the film to help his campaign for a change in the law to make it easier for the police to arrest people who bully and intimidate people on social media platforms, even if they are not resident in the UK.

"I am campaigning for a change. I'd like to meet [Prime Minister] David Cameron and [his deputy] Nick Clegg to ask why are they not changing their legislation," said the film-maker.

Although he has heard politicians say in the past that people worried by online hate speech should "just come off the platform", Kevin insists that for someone like him, that is simply not an option.

"At the end of the day because of my condition I can't use restaurants and pubs like some people."

"The only way that I can communicate with people is online," he added.

Kevin's campaign is generating momentum and 105 MPs have signed up to changing the law.

He also wants Twitter to change the way it operates.

"Twitter is not protecting their most vulnerable users," he said.

The 15-minute film is available to watch on the video sharing website YouTube.

More information about his work is available online at www.autism-campaign.co.uk

New app is safety first

ANNE-MARIE SANDERSON

A PERSONAL safety app has been launched to help residents communicate quickly with friends and family if they need help.

The Tap-It application is a joint venture by Enfield Council and Southwark Council, in south London, with £60,000 funding from the Mayor's Office for Policing and Crime.

The free mobile phone app uses GPS technology to find an exact location, as well as storing set messages for groups of friends and family to alert them of a safe arrival or a need for collection.

Enfield Council's cabinet member for community well-being Christine Hamilton said: "Tap-It not only helps keep people safe but it will also help them feel safe as well. This clever app means you will know whether your loved ones are safe or if they feel threatened and need to be collected."

"It will revolutionise the way we think about public safety and how we let our friends and family know we are okay. And because it is a one-touch application, it is extremely easy for both young and old to use.

"There are all sorts of ways its use can be tailored by residents. It can act as a reminder that the kids need picking up from after-school clubs, elderly people can use it to let their children know they are safe and well and friends on a night out can use it to get back in touch if they get split up."

"The possibilities are endless and limited only by the user's imagination."

The app, which the authorities say is no substitute for calling the police, also has details about local services and helplines where users can get advice on issues ranging from personal safety to domestic violence.

Tap-It is designed by Xantura and is available to download for free from Android and Apple stores. To download, search for "Tap-it safety app" in the app store. For more details, visit www.tap-it.com

ATTILA THE STOCKBROKER @ BUTLER'S BAR

7:30 PM SATURDAY 1 FEBRUARY 2013

SHARP-TONGUED, HIGH ENERGY, SOCIAL SURREALIST REBEL POET AND SONGWRITER. HIS THEMES ARE TOPICAL, HIS WORDS HARD-HITTING, HIS POLITICS UNASHAMEDLY RADICAL, BUT ATTILA WILL MAKE YOU ROAR WITH LAUGHTER AS WELL AS SEETHE WITH ANGER...

Inspired by the great Sussex poet Hilaire Belloc and punk, especially The Clash, he did his first gig on 8 Sept 1980, shouting poems in between punk bands. He quickly got two John Peel sessions and was on the front cover of Melody Maker - and he hasn't looked back since...

He's done about 2,800 more in 24 countries - at venues ranging from the Glastonbury Festival (every year since 1983) and countless other music and literature festivals in the UK, Europe, America, Canada, Australia and New Zealand to freezing punk squats in Germany to the Law Society and the Oxford Union and a hotel basement in Stalinist Albania.

He's released 6 books of poems and over 20 CDs/LPs, formerly with people like Unwins, Bloodaxe and Cherry Red Records, latterly via his own global cottage industry, Roundhead. (No cavalier attitudes!)

Attila is also a massive football fan, as reflected in his material, and a supporter of fans owned clubs - that's why he is playing at Enfield Town FC. He is poet in residence at Brighton and Hove Albion and his Goldstone Ghosts poem is on the walls of the supporters' bar at the Amex. He also coordinates his gigs with the Brighton fixture list and will be doing this gig on the way home from Albion's game at Watford.

As this is a football club gig you can expect a higher football content to the act than might normally be the case.

Attention: DENTURE WEARERS Attention: DENTURE REPAIRS

If you are a denture wearer then this article may be of some interest to you!!
If you can relate to any of the following questions then it is a sign your denture needs attention:

DO YOU FIND YOUR DENTURES:

- Do not fit as well on your gums as they used to?
- Are they loose?
- Do not cut food as well as they used to?
- Do they make your face look older?
- Have discoloured despite meticulous cleaning or
- Cause discomfort/pain on chewing?

If any of the above breeds familiar territory then I may be able to alleviate some of these problems for you.

My name is Caroline Persaud I am a qualified CLINICAL DENTAL TECHNICIAN.

Many of you may be aware of Dental Technicians/Mechanics who repair and produce dentures for dentists, however, due to recent changes in the Dental law, a group of Dental Care Professionals known as Clinical Dental Technicians have been approved by the General Dental Council and can now see denture wearers who have no natural teeth remaining, directly without having to visit a dentist. The advantages to you, the patients, are numerous. You can be treated by a professional who has been clinically trained to undertake the impressions of your mouth and who also has the technical skill to manufacture your denture to meet your requirements.

A more direct, rapid and personalised service, that can be delivered to you in the comfort of your own home or at my day clinic in Edmonton.

READ: King John pupils with author Nigel Hinton

Book buddy

NOT many pupils get the chance to quiz the writer of their exam set books but youngsters in a Benfleet school did.

Author Nigel Hinton dropped into a Year 8 English class in King John School and answered questions about Buddy – his first book and pupils' curriculum choice.

Nigel, who now has a long list of titles to his name, said: "I was delighted to find Buddy on the curriculum and even more pleased to have a chance to meet the pupils studying it."

He had been invited to the school by a friend whose son Oliver Sales was a pupil reading the book. When he heard how much the class was enjoying the story he decided to ask the writer to meet his enthusiastic audience.

"I had a great time with the class," Nigel said. "The pupils had written to me with questions before hand and I was impressed with the scope."

A school spokesman said: "It was a great day and I am sure the pupils were inspired by meeting Nigel."

The book Buddy, is about 13-year-old boy who falls on hard times.

Primary school recognises value of teaching kids core life skills

A PRIMARY school in Winchmore Hill is hoping to gain official recognition for its work in teaching children core values such as friendship, responsibility and compassion.

Eversley Primary School has nominated itself to receive a Values Education Quality Mark from the International Values Education Trust, a charity which helps schools to inspire their pupils to become successful and happy members of society.

As part of its new values-based education approach, the school has identified 22 values it wants the children to adopt and is devoting a month to each of them.

The school has also worked with visual artist Honor Pinner to create a mural inspired by the 22 values, which now sits inside the foyer of the building in Chaseville Park Road.

Chairwoman of governors Ingrid Cranfield told the Advertiser: "The whole idea is that we turn out holistically educated young people who already have insight at the age of ten or 11 and will understand how people should function in society."

She added: "You don't just go to school to learn maths and English – it is about the whole person and understanding how you fit into society."

Ms Cranfield said that the school had seen a huge improvement in the attitudes and behaviour of its pupils.

"You get even reception children talking about the values that they have just been learning about, like friendship. They say, 'So and so showed me a good example of friendship in the playground,'" she added.

The school will receive a visit from the trust, which was founded by education expert Dr Neil Hawkes, on February 14 to decide if it should be awarded the mark.

If successful, Eversley will join around 50 other schools in England and around the globe to be given the accolade.

Help with changes to Housing Benefit

Working-age people living in social housing now receive Housing Benefit based on the number of people in their household and the size of their accommodation. Pensioners are not affected by this change.

This change helps families who live in overcrowded accommodation or on waiting lists to find a new home. People who rent from private landlords already get Housing Benefit in this way, and this makes it fair for everyone.

If you are affected, you should have heard from your council.

There is support to help you manage these changes, including:

- thinking about downsizing or 'home swapping' to a different sized property
- finding a job or increasing your hours can make you better off
- applying to your council for a Discretionary Housing Payment.

Find out more about all your options at www.gov.uk/housing-benefit or talk to your council.

FAMILY ANNOUNCEMENTS

Woman of the Year nod was real shock for former mayor

Standing tall: Kate Anolue was named Nigerian Watch UK Woman of the Year

By Kim Inam

kim.inam@nlhnews.co.uk

A FORMER mayor of Enfield claimed the top spot in a competition to be named the Nigerian Watch UK Woman of the Year – despite not even knowing she had been nominated.

Upper Edmonton ward councillor Kate Anolue had no idea she had been shortlisted for the newspaper's competition against five other women, including two other London councillors, earlier this month until two days after the voting had started.

Mrs Anolue secured the most backing in the competition, beating her closest rival Anna Mbachu, a former mayor of Waltham Forest, by almost 300 votes.

Speaking to the Advertiser, Mrs Anolue said: "I feel honoured, excited and surprised. I didn't even know about the nomination because I was on holiday in Nigeria at the time."

Mrs Anolue, who worked as a midwife at North Middlesex University Hospital, in Sterling Way, Edmonton, for 40 years, was widowed when her youngest child was just 18 months old.

But despite being a single mother of four children, she continued to work full time and even studied for a law degree part time.

For the last 12 years she has also been a Labour councillor in Enfield and was mayor in 2012.

"When I was mayor I found out about a lot of things in the community," she said, "and realised a lot of people still needed help."

Now a grandmother and retired, Mrs Anolue shows no signs of slowing down and works with groups in both the UK and Nigeria including Stroke Action. She also set up the Forum For African Women in Politics and Tendercare Health Initiative, for single and new mothers.

Mrs Anolue, who also lost a child to cot death, says that she has experienced everything and credits her achievements to having good friends and a good work ethic.

"It's one of the things I speak to women and single parents about," she explained. "How it's possible to bring up children on your own, with a determined belief in yourself – and that includes time management."

"I think the door is open for everybody – it depends on the way you tackle it. It doesn't matter where you are – you can achieve."

"Your children learn from you as well, my kids are all graduates. They ask me how I did it, but they were good kids and I showed them the right way."

Mrs Anolue also mentors schoolchildren interested in politics.

To find out more about her work, she can be contacted by calling 07529 982 313.

Cafe up for tender after admin error

By Ruth McKee

ruth.mckee@nlhnews.co.uk

A CAFE that was at the centre of a bitter row over who has the rights to set up shop in Trent Park is back up for grabs less than two years after the dispute was settled.

Adventure Forest, a parent company of adventure play specialists Go Ape!, won the tender for the cafe in April 2012.

That was in the face of fierce opposition from protesters furious at the prospect of the company running the cafe alongside its treetop adventure course.

At the time, campaigners were adamant that the tendering process had been rushed through by the council.

And now, 21 months after the contract was awarded, the local authority has announced that it is launching an entirely new bidding process.

Whoever wins will run the cafe uninterrupted for 12 years.

An Enfield Council spokesman said: "As previously reported, an administrative error in the procurement process has led to the retendering of this contract. The current incumbent, Adventure Forest Limited, was not at fault in this process."

Cabinet member for environment Chris Bond added: "The contract for the Trent Park Cafe is being retendered for a period of 12 years following a review of the existing contract process.

"There has been a lot of interest and we look forward to working with the successful bidder."

When contacted by the Advertiser, Go Ape! confirmed that it is bidding to continue managing the cafe.

Ben Davies, business development manager at Go Ape!, said: "We are involved in a competitive commercial process and are not in a position to comment at this moment in time."

film review

It's monstrously tedious

I, Frankenstein (12A, 92 minutes)

THERE have been many silver screen versions of Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, but the latest, I, Frankenstein, sees the nuts, bolts and ghoulish green paint of yore cast aside for a rather more attractive "monster", played by the handsome Hollywood star Aaron Eckhart.

Eckhart, who has been christened Adam and is implausibly made out of the corpses of eight equally attractive hunks, has been roaming the earth for 200 years looking for his purpose in life.

While doing this, Adam meets the demons and the gargoyles who are embroiled in an age-old conflict between good and bad.

The demons, fronted by Bill Nighy, are desperate to get their mitts on Adam to see if they can use his soulless body to resurrect their late demon pals, and have also got hold of Adam's creator's diary to find out how to make more monsters.

The gargoyles, meanwhile, are busy trying to keep peace on earth – a big task and one they take very seriously, as they repeatedly infer.

Naturally, when a young scientist played by Yvonne Strahovski finds out what the Demon Prince (Nighy) is up to, she tries to help Adam get the diary back and abort his plans.

Brooding:
Aaron Eckhart plays the title role in I, Frankenstein

Will they get the diary back? Can Adam be saved? Will the rest of the cast perfect their pained expressions in time for the final fight?

To be honest, by that stage, you will scarcely bother to ask the question, let alone be interested in the answer.

I, Frankenstein is billed as an epic battle of good versus evil, but a simplistic plot, one-dimensional writing and next level corny script (entirely lacking in intentional humour) mean you neither root for the good, nor abhor the evil nor cheer on the monster. You simply don't care.

That's not to say that Eckhart is bad – he's not – it's just that I, Frankenstein is beneath his, and the rest of the cast's, talents.

The film is mercifully short, however. And, on a plainly visual level, Eckhart's monster is the only one in cinematic history that most people would like to see rip off their shirt and prepare for dissection. So there is that.

Stockbroker shares football with poetry

By Kim Inam

kim.inam@nlhnews.co.uk

RUDE, loud and left wing is how Attila The Stockbroker has described himself.

He is performing at the Queen Elizabeth Stadium, in Donkey Lane, Enfield, on Saturday night with his own brand of poetry focusing on political satire and football as well as personal tales and songs about bankers "rubbing our noses in it" – and warns anyone of a delicate nature to keep away.

John Baine stumbled on his stage name while working as a clerk at a stockbrokers. "They hated me, I hated them," he recalls. "I worked there for 11 months. One day someone told me I had the manners of Attila The Hun and I came up with the name."

He has spent more than 30 years touring the country performing his poetry or music – he has a band called Barnstormer, which plays medieval music and punk – often linking his gigs with the fixtures of his football team Brighton and Hove Albion – they are playing Watford the following day.

He is performing at the home of Enfield Town FC because he is a supporter of fan-owned clubs, setting up the Brighton and Hove Albion Independent Fans' Association and playing a leading role in the campaign to get the team back to a stadium in their home town.

Even though his act features the nation's favourite game and poetry, the two hardly mix, says John.

"Much of the time at gigs people don't want to hear too much about football and at the football they don't want to go into poetry," he says, "but football can be seen in the context of wider social issues."

"One of the things about modern football players is they live in a bubble, they don't have a clue what's happening in front of them and they wouldn't be aware of the fan culture. One of the things I love about fan-owned clubs is that the players are part of the set-up."

Saturday's show starts at 7pm. Tickets are £7 and are available from Steve Read on 07811 227 878 or by email at steve.read@enfieldtownfootballclub.co.uk

The Right Time to Borrow

Are you thinking of moving this year? If you're putting it off until the summer months, consider the upcoming changes in mortgage regulations. Richard Oughton from Ellis and Co Enfield Town Branch explains why now may be a better time to buy your next dream home.

On the 26th April 2014, new mortgage regulations will be enforced as a reaction to the Mortgage Market Review. This could result in fewer mortgage approvals and a longer application process, making the moving process more stressful.

The Mortgage Market Review (MMR) which began in 2007, was a comprehensive review of the mortgage market, triggered by a trend of over-lending from banks during the property boom of 2005-2007. During this prosperous time, the mortgage market clearly worked well for some whilst causing significant hardship for others. The previous regulations during the property boom were ineffective at preventing high risk lending and borrowing, leaving many mortgages they could not afford. The MMR and the regulations set to come into play in April will still allow low risk lending and borrowing, whilst preventing the poor, high risk decisions we saw in the past.

So what does this mean for you? Lenders will become responsible for assessing whether you can afford the loan. This includes verifying your income. It will be more difficult to get a mortgage and more people will be turned down if they are asking to borrow close to or at the limit of what they can afford.

Lenders must also check whether you will be able to afford expected rises in interest rate, preventing loans that people can only afford whilst interest rates are low.

Potential buyers can still borrow an interest only mortgage but they must provide proof of a credible repayment strategy.

To borrow, in most cases you will have to talk to a mortgage advisor. As a result, most borrowers must receive professional advice rather than left to research independently.

In short, from April 2014, the application process will be longer, more complicated and more invasive. As lending regulations tighten, you will have to endure lengthier interviews and provide more detailed documentation. Richard Oughton believes securing your mortgage now, could be the better option.

Richard Oughton, Ellis and Co. 58 Church Street, Enfield, EN2 6AX. 020 8363 8282 email: enfield@ellisandco.co.uk.

Going, going..... Not gone yet!

Whether your investment objectives are for a high monthly yield, high capital growth or a combination of the two, it always pays to buy at the right price.

Auctions can be a great way of doing this. With the vendor focused on a quick sale, bargains are often there to be had.

I first spotted a two bedroom ground floor flat in Picketts Lock Lane N9, in an auction catalogue in December with a guide price of £155,000. There were no takers first time round and now it's back at auction again with a reduced guide price of £140,000. Could it be worth an offer?

The property is listed as requiring internal 'modernisation', which could mean many things. However assuming that you could buy and modernise for £155,000, with potential rent of £1,150pcm that would lead to a yield of just under 9%! Add to this the possible impact of the Council's proposed regeneration in the area and over time the capital growth may well be equally impressive.

Be careful before you buy at auction though, because once you've bid you're committed to buy. To avoid making a costly mistake you should always visit the property, have a survey carried out, have all your finances in place and make sure your solicitor has checked out the legal pack before you bid.

At Belvoir Enfield we are not involved in sales so we are able to provide unbiased advice on any investment opportunity. Please call me for further information.

Stylish Leon is one of the great all-rounders

By Matt Kimberley

SIX months ago, I was given the Seat Leon 1.4 TSI SE to test on a long-term basis. Now, 10,000 miles up and down the country through the worst urban traffic and the best B-road blasts later, I have a pretty fine idea of just how good an all-rounder it is.

The engine is an absolute gem. Smooth, quiet and gutsy at low revs thanks to turbocharging, it's also vastly more economical than you'd imagine.

On one motorway trip, from Bristol to north Staffordshire, I saw a 60-65mph cruise rewarded with 62mpg on the trip computer.

But, at the other end of the spectrum, the performance on offer is remarkable. A little turbo lag is followed swiftly up by strong – really strong – acceleration up to 5,000rpm or so, perfect for when it's just you, a dry, winding road and some spare petrol in the tank.

The real highlight, however, is getting into it after a tiring day.

The hush of the drivetrain at idle is far more relaxing than diesel clatter, and it's only when you live without that noise that you realise how much it can bother you.

On the size side, the clue is in the word "compact". The Leon isn't the biggest car in the world, but it suits normal people's normal needs, so obviously you can't get a sofa into it.

You can, however, get a fridge into it – as I found out during a mad, pre-closing time dash to a store.

Whether it was behind the wheel or on the back bench seat with my better half installed as pilot for the day, I never felt the Leon was short on space.

This generation of car has a longer wheelbase than before, making room for more passenger space.

Several comfortable trips with parents and in-laws in the back are testament to how well the Leon can cope with everyday life.

Of course, no car is perfect and I did come across some niggles. The main one was the "driver tired" alert, which comes as part of an optional safety pack that also includes belt reminder warnings for the back seats.

The tiredness recognition system would nag away at me any time I spent more than 20 miles on the motorway, regardless of what I was doing with my head, the controls or my speed – and seemingly with no correlation to how tired I felt.

Up comes the coffee cup symbol and warning on the dashboard. It's like being scolded by teacher.

The only other niggle I found was in the (optional) sat-nav. The screen is low-res and old-tech compared to some the Volkswagen Group has, although the dear lady inside it mis-

Facts at a glance

■ Model: Seat Leon 1.4 TSI 140 SE, £17,840 on the road (£18,880 as tested).

■ Engine: 1.4-litre turbocharged four-cylinder petrol producing 138bhp and 184lb ft torque.

■ Transmission: Six-speed manual gearbox driving the front wheels.

■ Performance: Top speed 131mph, 0-62mph in 8.1 seconds.

■ Fuel economy: 54.3mpg.

■ CO2 rating: 119g/km.

directed me just once in six months of use.

At the end of the day, the Leon 1.4 TSI SE is proof positive that Seat has produced a complete car – one with broad talent to manage the needs of its owners and cope with everything asked of it.

It's refined, trouble-free and economical, if treated gently, as well as having all the practicality it needs.

The one thing I haven't mentioned yet is the styling, and given that the Leon is one of the best-looking cars ever built for this class, you'd be mad not to consider it yourself.

TOWNSEND JOY AT RETURN TO ACTION

By Dominique Stafford

sport.enfield@nlhnews.co.uk

ANDROS TOWNSEND is hoping to make an immediate impact on his return from injury when Tottenham Hotspur play host to Premier League title favourites Manchester City tonight (7.45pm).

Having made a stunning start to the season which saw him break into the England side, the winger has been sidelined since pulling a hamstring against West Ham United on December 18.

However, Townsend has now regained full fitness and is expected to feature in tonight's key showdown.

"When you're a footballer you are disappointed when you're injured," he said. "But you have to take the positive in every negative. Yes, I was injured, but I had a hectic six months at the start of the season.

"It's given me the chance to reflect, recuperate and try and come back even stronger. You could take it one of two ways. You could mooch around, or you can take the positive and come back stronger.

"Now I'm looking to the Manchester City game to come back better than I was. I'll be ready."

Townsend picked up his injury in Tim Sherwood's first match in charge, and he is relishing the opportunity to impress his new head coach.

"I worked with him for four or five years in the youth set-up," he added. "He's always been supportive of my abilities, always told me not to waver from what I do, to never change from trying to take people on and make things happen.

"In that way, he's been a huge influence on my career. Hopefully now he's in charge I can start repaying his faith, break back into the Spurs team and start scoring goals for him."

Meanwhile, Spurs were handed a further boost when four other players made their returns from injury during a behind-closed-doors friendly against West Ham on Thursday.

Brazilian international midfield duo Sandro and Paulinho made their comebacks following calf and ankle problems respectively, while central defenders Younes Kaboul and Jan Vertonghen also featured.

And Vertonghen, who played for 60 minutes on his first appearance since picking up an ankle injury in early December, was delighted to get back out on the pitch.

"I felt fine," he said. "It was just about the perfect game to come back in.

"I need a little more mobility and training, but I played for 60 minutes and I'm ready. I'm very happy to be out there again, happy to be back with the lads in the dressing room.

"We've won five of the last six, we're fifth in the table and we want to keep going. You always need competition for places to progress, and everyone wants to play in the next game."

Set for comeback: Andros Townsend has recovered from his hamstring injury and could feature for Tottenham tonight

Skolars fall short in the Capital Challenge

THE London Skolars suffered a 48-0 defeat at the hands of a Wigan Warriors XIII in the annual Capital Challenge at the Honourable Artillery Company in the city of London on Friday.

Wigan fielded a number of youngsters who have Super League experience, and they proved too strong for a spirited Skolars outfit who were playing in their opening pre-season fixture.

The Skolars held firm until the 26th minute but, with their ability to create gaps in the defence, Wigan always looked the more likely side to make the breakthrough.

The opening try eventually arrived when Rhys Pusgley broke clear before setting up fellow prop Sam Hopkins to touch down, while Dom Manfridi crossed the line out wide on the right soon after.

Lewis Tierney added a third try shortly before the interval, and more gaps began to appear in the Skolars defence after they started to ring the changes in the second period.

Anthony Gelling broke from halfway to start a move which Jamie Doran finished by touching down, while Tierney and Manfridi both scored their second tries of the match.

Jack Murphy was the next man to cross the line, while Manfridi rounded off the scoring by claiming two more tries. Jake Shorrocks converted six of the eight tries.

However, the afternoon was somewhat marred by a serious injury to the Skolars' Smokie Junor, who was taken to hospital with a suspected broken femur.

Coach Joe Mbu said: "This is our first game, and if that is what we showed in our first game, then I am really looking forward to our fourth and fifth games. The boys will take an awful lot from the match.

"The injury to Smokie took the gloss off the afternoon, but I don't want to say any more until we know how serious the injury is."

Eriksen relishing City showdown

CHRISTIAN ERIKSEN is optimistic that Tottenham Hotspur can make amends for their humbling defeat at the Etihad Stadium when they host high-flying Manchester City in the Premier League tonight.

Spurs were thrashed 6-0 when the two sides met in Manchester in November, a result which piled the pressure on then head coach Andre Villas-Boas – who eventually lost his job a few weeks later.

City have continued to go from strength to strength since then, finally beginning to reproduce their stunning home form on the road as they are currently on a run of seven straight league wins which had seen them climb to within a point of leaders Arsenal prior to the Gunners' trip to Southampton last night.

But Tottenham are also on a good run in the league, dropping just two points in the six matches since Tim Sherwood took charge and Eriksen – who missed the first meeting with City through injury – is relishing tonight's clash.

"I didn't play in the game at City, but I watched it on the TV and I felt for the guys," Eriksen said. "Hopefully we can put it right now.

"You can feel that the game is getting closer. Everyone wants to be 110 per cent for this game.

"Everyone knows that you have to be on your toes when you play City. You don't even have to say it. We have to be at our top level, and that's what we want to achieve in this game."
